Editor's Note

Peace Research is now in its 4th year. Judging from the requests for new subscriptions (we now mail out 1400) and absence of cancellations (almost none) we can only believe that you find the journal of value.

But you do not like the fine print--so we've altered the format (see new instructions); otherwise nothing's changed.

Once again let us emphasize our philosophy. If the new discipline of peace research is to proceed as quickly as we think that it should, peace researchers should be publishing:

1) A brief report of their work so their colleagues can keep informed;
2) The complete article in a standard scholarly journal;
3) Popular accounts of their research in the mass media.

So send us the early brief results of your work in the knowledge that it will appear immediately and remember -- though our readers are not many, in this field they are the elite.
